MORE than 100 of Hackney's community leaders came together on 12 April to discuss the recent increase in violent crime in the borough and across London.

Representatives from youth organisations, the Council, housing associations, police, faith groups, charities, the voluntary sector, and young people and local MPs, formed a united community voice against violence.

They used the event, also attended by Mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, and Deputy Mayor for Policing and Crime, Sophie Linden, to talk about their experiences of violent crime and discuss what more can be done locally to reduce violence and fear of crime.

Tim Shields, Chief Executive of Hackney Council, said: "The recent tragedies in our borough have been felt across Hackney, and residents are understandably concerned.

"This event showed Hackney at its best; we were overwhelmed by the constructive response from our voluntary sector, community organisations and partners.

"We now all need to keep working together to ensure the enthusiasm and valuable contributions on the night lead to real changes in our communities to make Hackney a safer place.

"The Council has worked with the police and youth and voluntary organisations for many years, with progress being made in tackling gangs and violent crime in Hackney. We need to make sure we continue to build on this progress."

"We now all need to keep working together to ensure the valuable contributions on the night lead to real changes" held at the Tomlinson Centre in Haggerston, were also informed about how the Council and its partners use a number of initiatives to support young people and families at risk of crime.

The Integrated Gangs Unit (IGU), which is made up of embedded youth workers, the Probation Service and police officers, works with about 150 people who are involved in gang crime to support them to change their behaviour.

It funds services such as Mentivation, a mentoring, motivation and mediation service that works with young people experiencing difficulty in education, and the Crib's Parent's Voice project, which brings together parents worried that their children are at risk of being involved in gangs.

Young Hackney, the Council's youth service, offers a variety of early help and prevention services for young people.

It has maintained services at its four youth hubs, and runs a range of targeted support in the home, school and community for young people who are at risk of offending, discrimination or exploitation, have been victims of violence, or are experiencing poor mental health.

The Young Black Men programme was set up in 2015 with ambitions to make outcomes for black boys and young black men the same as the wider population in 10 years' time.

It looks at the effect racial inequality has on education, employment, housing and health, and how things can be done differently.

This year's Big Do was a hive of activity

THE annual Big Do event for people with learning disabilities at Stoke Newington Town Hall was an informative affair.

The event, which took place on 21 March, was organised by residents from the social enterprise group Hackney Informed Voices Enterprise (HIVE) who have learning disabilities, in partnership with the charity POHWER, the Council, and City and Hackney Clinical Commissioning Group.

HIVE's residents showcased their speaking, digital, media and writing skills through videos and presentations to highlight the issues faced by people living with a disability.

There were also information stalls, workshops and opportunities to socialise and meet other people.

Junior Brown, a Director at HIVE, said: "It is essential that we come together and get our voices heard – especially people with disabilities – because we don't get enough of a platform to have a say.

"We need more people with a learning disability to get involved."

Joan Foley, one of the event's organisers, added: "The annual Big Do is an important event for people with learning disabilities.

"Initiatives like this are so important to build people's confidence and independence. It was lovely to see everyone on stage working together as a team."

HIVE helps residents with issues they may face, such as

"We need to make sure people with disabilities are heard and have a voice in services that affect them" housing, health, education or employment.

Susan Justice, also from HIVE, acted as compere on the day. She said: "It is good when people get together, we need to make sure people with disabilities are heard and have a voice in services that affect them.

"Some people who have a disability don't get to mix with others so we need more events like this."

Service user
Peter Allum

helped organise the event and also showcased his photography skills (some of which are pictured on this page).

He said: "It has been hard work organising the event but it has all come together.

"We hope that people have been satisfied with what they have heard and taken something useful away from the day.

"Such events bring the community together with shared experiences and concerns."

First World War memorials listed

THREE of Hackney's First World War memorials have been granted Grade II listed status thanks to a Historic England project.

Two memorials can be found in the grounds of local churches, All Saints in Haggerston and St Barnabas in Homerton, while the third – in tribute to North London railwaymen – is by Hoxton Overground Station (pictured).

The move is part of a drive by Historic England to list 2,500 war memorials across the UK in time for the 100th anniversary of the end of the conflict this November.

Apply for small grants funding

CHARITIES and community groups in the borough can now apply for grants of up to £5,000 from the Council.

Hackney is one of the most diverse places in the UK. In this regular feature, we profile the borough's great & good or just plain interesting

28 days later

By Harriet Worsley

IN the early 1980s, Gillian Harris found herself living in Hackney, raising a three-year-old, and increasingly aware that: “the children’s books we were reading were all about white, nuclear families. They didn’t reflect the multicultural, diverse community around us.”

It bothered her. She says: “Children need to grow up knowing that we respect and value everyone.” And so she decided to do something about it.

In 1983, she co-founded Letterbox Library with Iven Spicer. A social enterprise that scoured small publishing houses around the world, Iven and Gillian hunted out children’s books featuring strong girls, characters from a range of ethnicities and disabled protagonists, selling them to schools, libraries and parents where children could learn from them.

Gillian says: “We celebrated diversity and equality, but the books we chose also had to work as books, and appeal to children and have good illustrations and storylines.”

“We also looked for storylines which focused on issues such as the environment, bullying, loss and bereavement.”

Many of Gillian’s favourite Letterbox books still line her shelves today: ‘Journey to Jo’burg’, by Beverley Naidoo; ‘Amazing

Grace’, by Mary Hoffman; and ‘Willie’s Not The Hugging Kind’, by Joyce Durham Barrett.

In fact, some of these books can now be seen in Hackney Museum’s exhibition, Making Her Mark: 100 Years of Women’s Activism, which is on display until 19 May.

“People came up to me after the launch,” laughs Gillian, “saying: ‘I had no idea you were part of Letterbox. It was a lifeline when trying to find good books for my children.’”

Since Gillian retired it was the plight of refugees that took centre stage. She says: “I kept reading about the terrible conditions at the Calais Jungle,” referring to the refugee encampment in France, which was closed in October 2016.

Gillian continues: “My daughter and I considered going to volunteer there, but then we thought it might be better to do something here, at home, instead.”

So they began researching Refugees at Home, a UK charity that works on a simple premise: connecting those with spare rooms with asylum seekers and refugees in need of accommodation.

“We signed up just over a year ago,” says Gillian. “And since then we’ve had six people come to stay.”

Most have been asylum seekers, granted refugee status and leave to remain.

It might be the outcome they have been praying for but, says Gillian: “They are then given just 28 days to vacate the hostel they’ve been living in. Twenty-eight days to find accommodation, get on the right benefits, get a job... It would be incredibly hard for lots of people who were born here with this system.”

For a newly arrived refugee it is often impossible and many end up sleeping rough, on the streets. The lucky ones are found by charities like Crisis and referred to Refugees at Home who go through their database of volunteer hosts and find a suitable match.

As a host, says Gillian: “You’re assessed and supported. It’s a four-way dialogue: us, the guest, Refugees at Home and the referring organisation.”

Some of their guests have arrived visibly traumatised, she says. “One travelled for two years to get here. Some have jumped on lorries. They have seen terrible things, and sometimes that trauma is visible, yes. But also, what I see is resilience. That, and determination.”

Hosts are not obliged to provide anything other than a room, but the reality, says Gillian, is: “As an asylum seeker, you’ve got £38 a week to pay for everything. So we cook some meals, and we’ve found everyone has pitched in to support us: our neighbours have invited guests for meals, to play football in the park, to visit the local mosque...”

That feeling of being included and welcomed, she suggests, can be almost as important to a refugee as the provision of a literal roof over their head.

“We’ve been told: you are my mother and father in this country” she says. “But we get a lot out of it too. We’ve sat down to delicious Eritrean meals, we’ve learnt a huge amount about other cultures and about friendship itself.”

It is hard to say goodbye to their guests, Gillian says,

Gillian Harris, co-founder of Letterbox Library, talks about being a host for refugees seeking a life in Britain

“We’ve sat down to delicious Eritrean meals, we’ve learnt a huge amount about other cultures and about friendship” but many have moved on to happier lives. One has been accepted onto a Masters course, so will be studying at university. And: “a couple of weeks ago, it was a former guest’s birthday,” she says. “We’d helped him get a job as a kitchen porter and he was given a voucher for his birthday meal. He invited us, and it was so lovely to sit around the table with him.”

There are over 30 Refugees at Home hosts in Hackney, but the charity desperately needs more.

“When I was young I travelled through Iraq and Iran,” says Gillian. “People were so welcoming everywhere I went. They shared food with me, offered accommodation. I took it for granted. But that’s not the welcome they get here. What if it was us in their situation? Wouldn’t we hope that the people who were able to, would help us?”

BUSY crowds, excited whispers and gleaming smiles filled Clapton's Anthony Marsh Building as locals hurried in to celebrate the 56th annual Springfield Youth Awards last month.

The event, on 22 March, began with a performance from Hackney's very own Springfield Soul, who brought the stage to life with their marvellous melodies and dashing dance moves.

As the audience settled down, they were introduced to the panel of hosts comprising Paul Stewart, Executive Chairman; Michael Keogh, Deputy Chairman; Said Hersi, Director; and Steve Herbert, Club Manager.

The panel also included TV personality Amanda Holden and ex-England footballer Jermaine Jenas.

The Britain's Got Talent judge, Amanda, said: "I was desperate to be an actress and had no kind of way of doing it back then. Amazingly, this woman started a theatre club and everybody went down there.

"For me that is where this all started. I finally got up on a stage and I would sing and dance and have someone who was volunteering to support me, keep me focused and help me realise my dreams.

"That's exactly what I felt when I walked into this building. Everyone's smiling, everyone's happy. It even smells the same, it smells of church halls, wood, coffee and tea.

"There was a real sense of family and community the minute I stepped in and shook the first person's hand. You can tell that everybody here is dedicated and supportive to all these young people. It just reminded me so much of when I first started."

Jermaine added: "I have to say, having walked into the building for the first time you can't help but just be massively impressed.

Amanda and Jermaine also took the time to answer questions about their careers, lives and opportunities growing up from the audience. The odd cheeky questions also slipped through, such as one about Amanda’s alleged tattoo of Simon Cowell.

A small break allowed event-goers to enjoy some delicious food and refreshments before a video, created by the club, allowed them to take a peek at the past year of trips, performances and competitions.

As the night continued, members and volunteers alike were presented with awards to honour their efforts for the club.

Girls Under 16 table tennis winner, Chardonnay Claridge, 15, summed up the evening. She said: “It’s nerve wracking to play and try new things, but it pays off in the end. I first started coming when I was tiny, then I stopped coming for a while, but now that I’m back I’m really enjoying reconnecting with the club.

“It’s like home. This is home. It’s nothing but amazing opportunities that you can get from here – and I love it.”

News in brief

Communal bin is a world first

A NEW style of communal bin, the first of its kind in the world, is being piloted by the Council to make it easier for residents in blocks of flats and estates to recycle. The 40 new bins, installed across several estates, have larger openings to make it easier to put carrier bags of mixed recycling inside. The lids are reversed and locked shut, to stop people contaminating the recycling with black sacks of rubbish or bulky waste. If the trial is a success, the bins will be rolled out across more estates and blocks of flats in the borough. Residents can check what they can recycle and order recycling bags at: hackney.gov.uk/recycling

Get involved in the Big Dig

THREE of Hackney's gardens will be opening their doors to visitors for the annual Big Dig this month, to encourage people to get involved in community food-growing.

The event, which takes place on 21 April, is a part of Capital Growth, a network of over 2,800 food growing gardens across London. They include allotment sites and community gardens – as well as quirkier spaces such as the Castle Climbing Centre Garden, pictured. The Big Dig in Hackney will also be taking place in Cordwainer Gardens and the Robin Hood Community Garden. For more details, visit: www.bigdig.org.uk/london

Funding to transform play area at Daubeney Fields

THE play area at Daubeney Fields in Lower Clapton will be transformed thanks to funding from two charities.

The Council has secured £115,000 from the London Marathon Charitable Trust and the Veolia Environmental Trust to transform the space into a playable landscape.

As well as installing more swings, slides and climbing structures, the play area will use the landscape to encourage more active, imaginative and accessible play.

The proposed plans have been designed in consultation with representatives from local primary schools, the Clapton Park Children's Centre and the park user group, Daubeney Fields Forever. Residents also had the opportunity to comment on the proposals at a community fun day.

Daubeney Fields is an important green space for thousands of people who live in flats without gardens on the nearby Clapton

Park and Kingsmead estates. This funding will be used to provide improved facilities for local children to get active and play outdoors.

Success at its core

HACKNEY can now boast that it is the best sports club in London.

Core Sport, a service designed to improve mental and physical health through exercise, was named 'London Sports Club of the Year' at the London Sport Awards last month.

The Core Sport programme is run by mental health charity Core Arts. It offers free courses in a wide range of sports from table tennis to white water rafting, and GPs can refer patients to the programme.

Core's Inclusive Sports Development Manager,

“It's so inspiring to see how our clients transform physically and mentally through sport”

Laura-Jane Connolly, said: “This is a fantastic endorsement of the work we've been doing to promote better mental health. Hopefully we can use this award as a springboard to reach even more people and offer even more courses.

“It's so inspiring to see how our clients transform physically and mentally through sport and incredible to see the effect on their confidence and social lives, which reinforces their recovery.”

Chair of the judging panel, Tove Okunniwa, added: “Every winner and nominee has had a significant impact on the health and prosperity of London.

“This commitment to grassroots sport makes our great city a blueprint for places around the world. I'm delighted to have seen so many inspirational stories given the platform they deserve at the London Sport Awards.”

The award ceremony, held at Wembley Stadium on 8 March, was organised to honour sports organisations that are changing lives in London.

News in brief

Students help make Hackney a dementia friendly borough

SOME of the borough's isolated older people have been receiving visits from students from Our Lady's Convent High School, N16.

Residents of Century Court in Upper Clapton, a Housing with Care scheme, were given fortnightly round-table tennis sessions and flower arrangement workshops. As part of the school's Core Religious Education, all of its A-level students are placed in the local community to provide interaction and activities to groups of isolated older people.

The pupils received training and support by Dementia Friendly Hackney and T3 Ping Pong Foundation, as part of its Dementia Friendly Hackney programme.

To help make Hackney a dementia friendly community, email: sandra.cater@alzheimers.org.uk; or call: 020 8533 0091.

Funding secured to help tackle Hackney's health inequalities

HACKNEY CVS, the local umbrella body for the voluntary sector, has recently secured funding to help tackle health inequalities in the borough.

The grassroots projects agreed for funding are: supporting migrants to access health services; bowel cancer awareness raising in the African community; and peer support for people living with long-term health conditions. Jackie Brett, Director of Communities and Partnerships at Hackney CVS, said: “The way to a fairer Hackney is to support people where they are and build service around people's needs; community groups do this.”

Take a pause at the Wellbeing festival, at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, on 16 May RESIDENTS are being encouraged to 'take a pause' and practise mindfulness as part of the Wellbeing festival on 16 May.

Now in its fourth year, the annual Wellbeing festival is set to take place at Dalston Eastern Curve Garden next month, as part of Mental Health Awareness Week.

The free event aims to get residents to take a pause from busy city life, teach them simple self-care techniques, and open the discussion about mental health.

The evening will run from 6-8.30pm, and is set to involve several community organisations from the City and Hackney Wellbeing Network. It will also include live music, food, and the opportunity to experience mindfulness, as well as free complementary therapies such as massages, yoga and aromatherapy.

Led by Mind in the City,

Hackney and Waltham Forest, the 'take a pause' campaign promotes the practice of mindfulness, and encourages residents to take a few minutes out of their everyday lives to invest in their wellbeing.

What is England? festival

20-23 Apr, The Old Church,
Stoke Newington Church St, N16 9ES

LONDON'S only surviving Elizabethan church seems a fitting place in which to ask the question: What is England?

And that's exactly what The Old Church in Stoke Newington is doing, in a newly announced festival that will take place in the run up to St George's Day. The 'What is England?' festival will host a wealth of gems exploring themes of St George and what it means to be English, with an emphasis on multiculturalism. On the line-up are British Asian Muslim comedian Shazia Mirza, DJs from independent music website The Quietus and online radio station NTS, Broadly editor Zing Tsjeng, and gal-dem Arts & Culture editor Micha.

The Nest Collective will also be examining the idea of 'Englishness' through folk music and in the company of artists including Ansuman Biswas, folk darlings Stick In The Wheel and multi-instrumentalist John Spiers. Best of all, there's the European debut of British-Bengali composer Bishi's song cycle The Good Immigrant – setting the scene of an inclusive, vibrant and downright glorious vision of England. Events within the What is England? festival are individually ticketed, so check online for prices and availability.

The Nature of Forgetting

24-28 April, Shoreditch Town Hall, 380 Old Street, EC1V 9LT

TIME is a slippery thing at the best of times, but within a mind gripped by dementia it slithers and jumps like a fish.

It is this phenomenon that The Nature of Forgetting depicts with such haunting beauty. The latest play to hit the Shoreditch Town Hall debuted at London's International Mime Festival, where it sold out, and then toured Latitude and the Edinburgh Fringe where it met with equally rapt audiences. Tom is celebrating his 55th birthday. But as he dressed for the party, the present slithers out of his grasp just like his tie, and he is plunged whole into his school days. Just as one moment in time slips into the next, the play's props and costumes are kept on stage, ever present and threatening to tip into the current scene. This is all-absorbing physical theatre at its best. You won't forget Tom's life easily, even if the hero himself may soon.

The Nature of Forgetting runs from 24-28 April at Shoreditch Town Hall. Tickets start at £15. Visit: shoreditchtownhall.co.uk

WOMAN SRSly

19 Apr, 8pm-11pm

Woman SRSly champions bold new performance by female-identified and socialised female artists through platforms and networking support.

Detail from Azulejão (Moon) by

MORE than 50 artists from across the US, Europe, the Middle East and Asia. Work from every decade between 1918 and 2018.

The Surface Work exhibition taking place across Victoria Miro's London galleries is an extraordinary homage to the female artists who have shaped abstract painting. Held at both Miro's Hackney and Mayfair spaces, it's a grand gesture, devoted to the work of women who have long gone unrecognised, and a timely one, coming directly after women's history month. This exhibition has real depth to it too. Catch work by the late American artist Mildred Thompson, who found inspiration in scientific theories, and whose buzzing palette of yellows and reds in calligraphic brushstrokes evoke the invisible forces of magnetic energy.

Other highlights include work by Alma Thomas who, in 1972 and at the age of 80, became the first African-American woman to receive a solo exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art, New York.

For Thomas, colour was a way 'to concentrate on beauty and happiness, rather than on man's inhumanity to man.' Amen to that, sister.

PUPILS from St John the Baptist School, N1, have unveiled new banners that warn road users to slow down for their school's zebra crossing.

The banners were designed by children at the Hoxton school with help from the Council.

They have been introduced to urge drivers and cyclists to stop and 'Respect the

Say 'sí' to Spanish

A PIONEERING initiative that encourages all Hackney primary schoolchildren to learn a modern foreign language has received recognition.

The borough's primary schools now provide Spanish as the first foreign language taught, helping pupils to develop a deep understanding of one language and making the transfer to secondary school much smoother.

The initiative started in 2013, and when the first cohort of pupils transferred to secondary schools last year, two thirds of the year 6 pupils left with a knowledge of Spanish.

The Council presented its modern foreign languages (MFL) strategy to a committee at the House of Lords last month. Representatives from Ofsted, the Department for Education, National

“Our curriculum has become enriched through our visits and international events”

Hackney paves the way for modern foreign languages tuition

Association of Head Teachers, Association of Language Learners, Chartered Institute of Linguistics, The Spanish Embassy, British Council as well as MPs and other interested language specialists listened to how the MFL initiative has benefitted Hackney's pupils.

Teachers and pupils from two schools and two academies joined experts from the Council to present the groundbreaking work.

They highlighted the key aspects of the initiative including giving pupils real life contextual experiences at primary age by visiting and building relationships with partner schools in Spain, and the impact that the initiative has had on the whole school curriculum.

Craig Porteous, Deputy Head Teacher at William Patten Primary School, said: "Since we started teaching Spanish in 2014, we have developed a more internationalist approach to the curriculum, gaining the British Council's International School Award, using the link with our partner school in Madrid to provide a real purpose for pupils' writing, and enabling them to read about the lives of Spanish children in the letters they receive.

"Our curriculum has become enriched through our visits and international events and our pupils have even made an app to support everyone and anyone to learn Spanish."

The Council also launched the Primary Spanish Award in 2016 to provide a framework within which schools can develop their Spanish curriculum.

So far, 10 Hackney primary schools have achieved the bronze award and three have achieved the silver award.

News in brief

School's interfaith tree planting brings communities together

FROM little seeds grow mighty oaks. And that is especially the case for the children of three Hackney primary schools, who got together to plant a tree symbolising cooperation across religious divides.

Pupils from Hoxton Garden Primary, N1, and the Olive School Hackney, N16, joined peers at Simon Marks Jewish Primary School, N16, to plant a cherry blossom tree in their school playground. Rabbi Herschel Gluck joined the children and spoke about the importance of uniting communities. The tree, a Prunus Cheals Weeping, was donated by the charity Faiths Forum 4 London.

Simon Marks' headteacher, Gulcan Metin, said: "It was wonderful to have other local schools with us celebrating our new tree. The tree and its roots are symbolic of the growing togetherness of our community."

Year 1 pupil Esther Rochman added: "I'm really glad we planted a tree in our playground to see it grow."

The City Academy Hackney

THE third annual 'Boys Can Sing' concert, hosted by The City Academy Hackney, was a roaring success.

This year, 130 boys from across the borough joined in unity to present an array of stylistically diverse choral pieces. These ranged from an energetic rendition of Stormzy's 'Blinded By Your Grace', to the all-time classic, Queen's 'We Are The Champions'.

Each year, the show is topped off with performances from a special guest. Stars in the past have included Shlomo and VOCES8. This year's headliner was Jermain Jackman, winner of The Voice UK 2014.

Six schools took part in the concert on 21 March: Daubeney Primary School, E5; Skinners' Academy, N4; St Monica's Roman Catholic Primary School, N1; Rushmore Primary School, E5; City of London Academy Shoreditch Park, E2, and the hosts, The City Academy Hackney, E9.

The day began with performers arriving at The City Academy Hackney, ready for a singing workshop led by Amede Unuabona from the House Gospel Choir. Amede ensured every note was pitch perfect for the evening's big finale, 'Louder Than Words' by Jermain Jackman.

Attendees had the privilege of honing in on one of Jermain's sound checks featuring The City Academy Hackney band.

This was before he delivered an insightful talk to the young men, detailing his The Voice UK journey, the hurdles he faced and his ascent to stardom.

Still on the subject of empowering young men, Jermain gave way for some especially confident performers to showcase

Boys can sing

Audience members left feeling inspired after the 'Boys Can Sing' concert

“I went to the City Academy Hackney with the intention to inspire these young men, but it was I who left inspired”

their talents, singing songs of their choice.

Aleksandra Zembron, organiser of the 'Boys Can Sing' event, and music teacher at The City Academy Hackney, said the concert was inspired by Gareth Malone's BBC programme with a similar name 'The Choir: Boys Don't Sing'. Aired in 2008, the programme's aim was to eradicate the idea that singing is 'just for the girls'.

Last month, Hackney boys took a stand in telling the world: 'hey, this is a way we want to express ourselves too'.

The evening carried a certain buzz along with it; a mesh of nerves, excitement and an electrifying charisma captivated the audience as the boys gave the performances of their lives.

Henry, a performer from The City Academy Hackney, said: "It was great. We got a chance to meet and sing with Jermain. He's definitely someone to look up to."

After the show Jermain gave attendees an insight on what he made of the day.

He said: "The Boys Can Sing event is a perfect example of what happens when you meet opportunity with the extraordinary hidden talent we have in our Hackney schools."

"I went to the City

Academy Hackney with the intention to inspire these young men, but it was I who left inspired. We need more projects like these in schools to empower our young people."

News in brief

Making it on the big screen

SIXTEEN young filmmakers – 11 of whom are from Hackney – are getting ready to screen their work at the prestigious BFI Southbank, after graduating from a course designed for underrepresented teens in the industry. Now in its fifth year, the MTR BFI Film Academy is a three-month filmmaking course in Shoreditch run by the youth arts organisation Mouth That Roars (MTR). It targets those from working class backgrounds, ethnic minorities, young people with disabilities and young women.

The filmmakers, between the ages of 16 and 19, are given one-on-one mentoring from industry specialists, hands-on experience and graduate with a recognised qualification. Young filmmaker Jordan said: "I learnt so much about film making – how to use professional equipment and about different shots... This experience has been amazing and will really help me in the future."

Two short films, Jordan's Story and The Interview, will premiere at the BFI Southbank on 21 April, after which there will be a Q&A session with the filmmakers.

Youth violence intervention scheme expands to Homerton

FUNDING has been secured for youth work charity Redthread to set up a specialist team in the Emergency department of Homerton University Hospital.

The Youth Violence Intervention Programme aims to provide young people, aged 11-24, with the tailored support needed to help keep them away from involvement in youth violence, either as a victim or as a perpetrator. Pioneered at King's College Hospital 13 years ago, the scheme operates in all of London's major trauma centres. The youth team work alongside the clinical staff and meet the young patients as soon as they can: in the A&E waiting room, on the ward, or in the resuscitation bay.

The idea behind the programme is, by providing support for the young person at the right moment, it can be a catalyst for pursuing positive change. After leaving the hospital, Redthread mentor and advise the young person and support them to make long-term positive plans.

Dr Niamh Ni Longain, Consultant in Adult and Paediatric Emergency Medicine, said: "We know that embedding this service in the Emergency Department will improve care for vulnerable young people in Homerton hospital." The service is set to go live in August. For more info, visit: www.redthread.org.uk

Wedding belles

Help Hackney Archives identify anyone who had a photo taken by Gibson between 1952 and 1978

MANY of the photographs taken by Ron Gibson's studio, in Clapton, feature people celebrating important events in their lives.

A key part of Gibson's business was wedding photography and the Gibson collection at Hackney Archives contains tens of thousands of wedding photographs.

Archives staff would love to hear from anyone who had their wedding photographed by Gibson between 1952 and 1978.

The collection also includes photos marking life events including christenings, bar mitzvahs, sünnet ceremonies, first communions, engagements and retirement and long service parties.

See more photographs from the Gibson collection online at flickr.com and on Facebook, by searching for Hackney Archives. An exhibition of Gibson's photos is set to open at Hackney Museum in May.

MORE INFO

 Hackney Archives will be featuring photographs from the Gibson collection in each edition of Hackney Today. If you recognise anyone in the photos, phone: 020 8356 8925; or e-mail: archives@hackney.gov.uk

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

SHOREDITCH Trust's Food For Life Programme works with members of the community to encourage affordable healthy eating, cooking skills and food knowledge. One of its participants, originally from Ethiopia, shares a family dish traditionally eaten by Orthodox Christians during Easter when meat and animal products are forbidden. Red lentils are quick to cook and are a fantastic source of protein, helping to lower cholesterol as well. Lentils are also high in fibre which helps prevent blood sugar rising rapidly after a meal, so are excellent for diabetics. This is a great sauce base and easy to make in batches and freeze. You can also add a variety of vegetables, including mushrooms, peppers, carrots and aubergines.

Fitsum's lentil stew (misir wot)

Makes 2-4 portions

Preparation time 15 mins
Cooking time 1 hour

Ingredients

- 2 red onions
- 3 tablespoons of olive oil
- 1 tin of chopped tomatoes
- 5 cloves of garlic
- 3 cm piece of ginger
- 2 tsp of berbere spice mix (or you can make your own with 1 tsp garlic granules, 1 tsp ginger powder, 1 tsp nigella/onion seeds, 2 tsp red pepper flakes)
- 250g of red lentils
- 1 litre boiling water.

Method

- Finely chop the onions and garlic and grate the ginger
- Place a large pan on medium heat, add olive oil and then

- the chopped onions. Cover for 5 minutes or until the onions have softened
- Now add the berbere spice mix and 2 tablespoons of water and mix until well blended
- Stir in the chopped tomatoes and add the garlic and ginger
- Place lid on the pan on a medium heat and allow to simmer for 5-10 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking
- Add the lentils and 800ml of hot water, mix well and allow to simmer, covered, for 5 minutes
- If required, add a further 200ml of hot water, replace lid and allow to simmer on a medium heat for 20 minutes or until lentils are soft
- Serve with salad and flat bread or injera bread, which can be found in Ethiopian cafes and restaurants.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by residents and serve for four years. The last borough-wide elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee Council services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

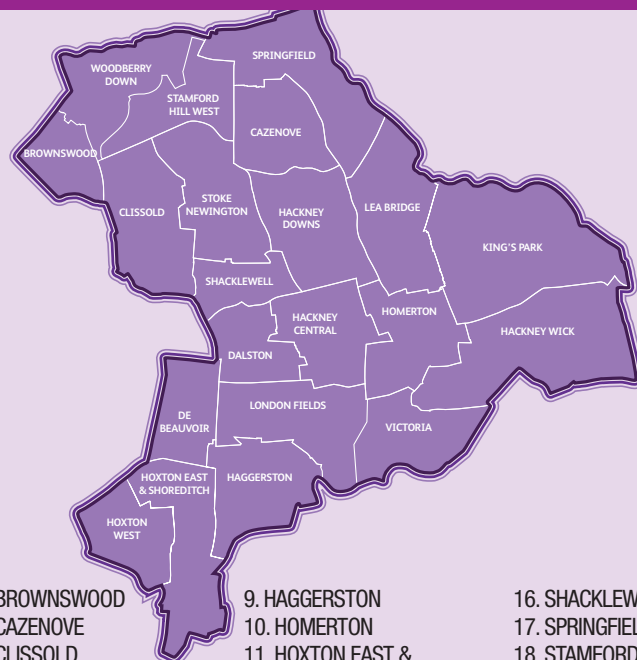

MAYOR PHILIP GLANVILLE

Hackney's executive Mayor Philip Glanville was directly elected by the borough in 2016. He is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. The Mayor holds monthly casework surgeries in the Town Hall.

To book an appointment, e-mail: mayor@hackney.gov.uk; or call: 020 8356 3269.

Residents are first encouraged to contact their ward councillor. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney, who is chosen annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Soraya Adejare.
